Why form a company in Germany?

Germany is the financial hive of the EU, with more than 1.6 Billion EUR spent in 2012. It is a centre for transportation and a bustling hive of business incorporation. The country is also renowned for protecting its peoples' intellectual property- with copyright and fringe laws being at the forefront of business. Additionally, all German constituencies provide free professional information for its entrepreneurs, and will help to find you relevant incentives for your formation.

The GmbH (GmbH-Private Limited Liability Company) is the most popular company formation within Germany, this is because it offers flexibility towards its shareholders. The formation is its own legal entity, separate from its directors. There are no legal requirements for the director(s) to reside in Germany, so long as they can obtain a working Visa to enter the country.

There are no specific legal requirements for shareholder(s). The shareholder(s) are not liable for credit if their share contribution has been paid in. It is also important to note that shares are able to be transferred and/or disposed of with no limits.

Tax information for your German Company Registration

Corporate Income Tax is applicable to both resident and non-resident businesses. Resident companies on their worldwide income, whereas non-resident companies are responsible for paying Corporate Income Tax on profits made within the country.

All businesses are subject to Municipal Trade Tax.

Trade Tax is dependent on the area that the business conducts in and varies throughout the country.

Group Companies are able to pool their profits and losses together, with the parent company becoming liable for the taxable income accrued. Additionally, losses of up to 1,000,000 EUR can be brought forward indefinitely throughout the course of business.

A GmbH may also be applicable for an SME (small and medium-sized enterprises) grant, which reduces taxes on a company reporting less than 235,000 EUR in their equity capital.

If the GmbH is a trading company it is also legally expected to add German VAT to its prices of goods and services, and to charge its customers in accordance.

Company Name for your German Company Registration

A German Company Formation (GmbH) must have its name registered on the Register of Commerce.

The name must not be misleading in regards to the businesses activities and must end in the appropriate legal suffix. For example, 'Limited', 'Ltd' or 'GmbH'

The name must not contain any Trademark registered words, the company's name cannot be confused with another company registered within the same borough.

Directors, Shareholders and Secretary

To set up a German Company Registration (GmbH-Private Limited Liability Company), there must be a minimum of one director and one shareholder. Throughout the initial set-up of a German Company Registration, there are two crucial meetings that have to occur to establish persons' with significant control. There may only be a maximum of three shareholders.

The first meeting is held between both the managing director(s) and shareholder(s). The second meeting is held by its shareholders, where they make the decision to appoint the company's managing director of operations.

Names, addresses and nationality of the company's shareholder(s) must be disclosed on public record. If there are any changes to these they must be reported.

A Company Director and Shareholder is required within a German Company Formation.

Please note that if the company has a complex corporate structure, an additional compliance fee may apply.

Share Capital

The minimum investment capital for forming a German Company Registration (GmbH-Private Limited Liability Company) is 25,000 EUR, however, it is only 12,500 EUR that has to be paid in at the time of formation.

However, it is important to note that within a GmbH Partnership (GmbH & Co. KG), there is no minimum required share capital.

Shares within a GmbH are governed by the Private Limited Companies Act.

The Initial Deposit must be deposited to a German Bank Account, this is removable once we receive confirmation and proof the deposit has been transferred.

Annual Requirements

It is important to note with a GmbH that a quarter of its annual profits must be allocated within reserves and not paid to its shareholders as dividends.

Annual Accounts for GmbH-Private Limited Liability Companies have to comply with the regulations set out in the German Commercial Code. Excluding sole-traders, the annual accounts are made-up on the basis of the following factors:

- The total amount on the balance sheet
- The annual turnover
- The total amount of employees

Additionally, if a GmbH-Private Limited Liability Company's securities are traded within the regulated market, the directors are legally responsible for producing a Financial Statement using International Financial Reporting Standards. Dependent on the size of the company, you may need to file a Financial Statement and provide an Audit Certificate at the German Commercial Registry, however, smaller GmbH companies only need to file a balance sheet and notes with the German Federal Gazette.

Yearly Renewal £1,640.00

On a yearly basis a German Company must renew their Registered Office Address.

The price to renew the Registered Office Address is £1,640.00
